BRAND SYSTEM · V1.0

Brand Guidelines

The visual and verbal identity system for Locate Digital — refined for a more premium, sleek, corporate presentation while keeping every colour, mark and word that clients already recognise.

Version	Date	Owner	Applies to
1.0	September 2026	Sam · Locate Digital	Website, decks, ads, documents, social

Brand foundation

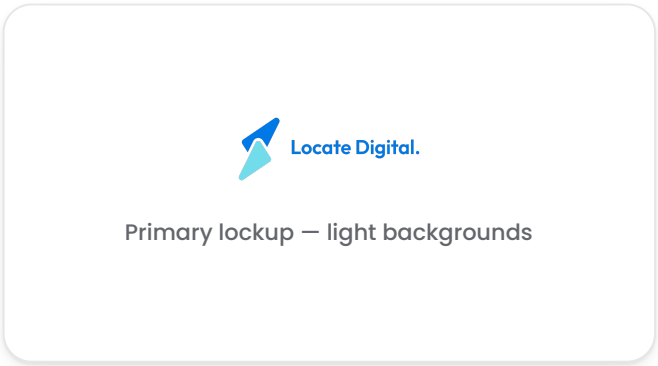

Before any colour or font, the guidelines start with what Locate Digital is actually for. Every visual decision in this document is in service of this positioning.

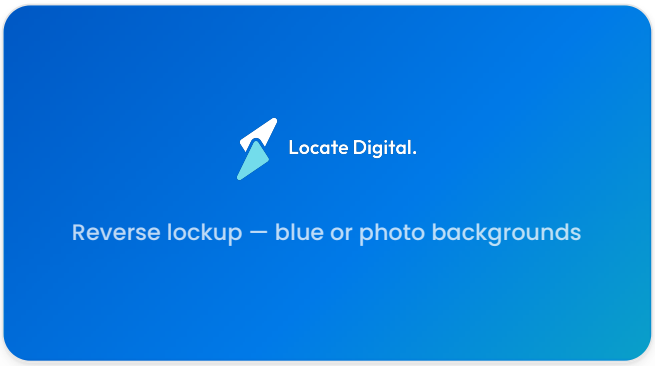

One-sentence USP	We help Melbourne service businesses book more new customers with Google and Meta ads, without wasting spend or being locked into long contracts.
Who we're for	Established, time-poor service business owners (physio, osteo, allied health, dental, legal, trades) who want more bookings, not a marketing education.
What we lead with	Outcomes — new patients, bookings, cost per enquiry. Never deliverables — posts, impressions, reach.
What makes us credible	Specialist in service businesses, plain-English reporting, no lock-in contracts, real numbers over vague claims.

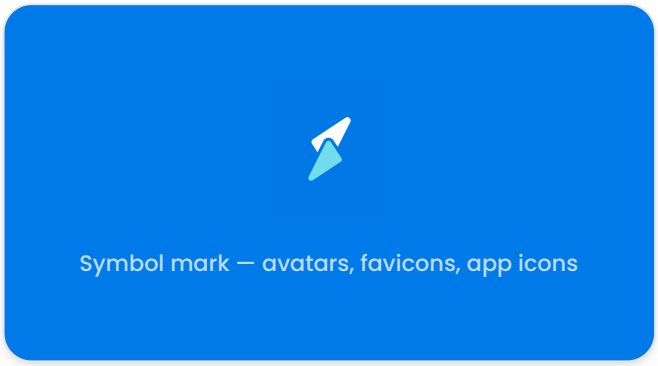

This is the standard every asset gets held to: does it look like it belongs to a specialist a business owner would trust with real budget? That standard is what "premium" means in this document — not a new colour, a calmer, more confident execution of the one we already have.

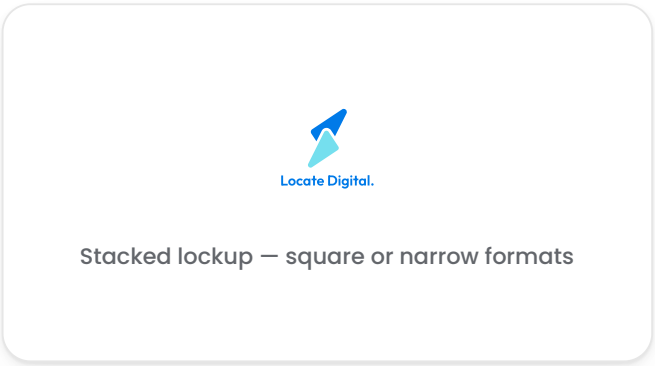

Logo

The mark is a location pin built from two overlapping triangles — the "locate" in Locate Digital. It never changes colour, angle or proportion. Three lockups cover every background.

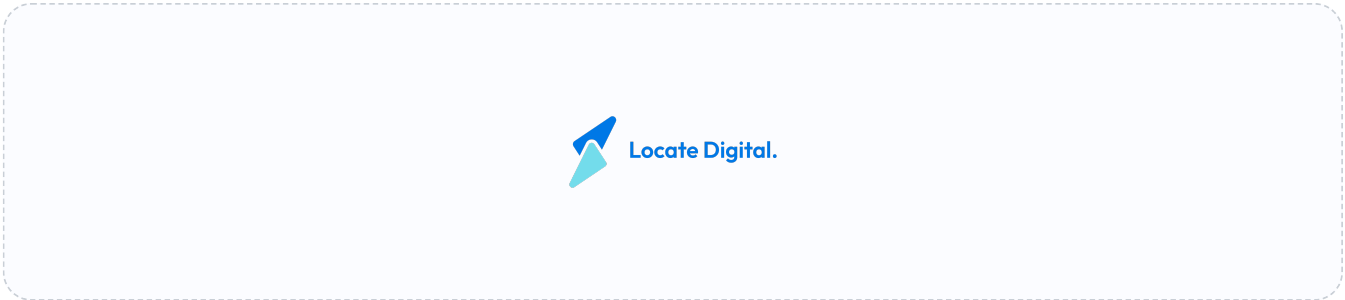

Clear space & minimum size

Keep clear space equal to the height of the pin symbol on all sides — nothing else (text, edges, other logos) sits inside that margin. Never scale the horizontal lockup below 28px tall on screen or 18mm in print; below that, use the symbol mark alone.

Incorrect usage

Don't stretch or distort

The pin's proportions are fixed. Scale uniformly only.

Don't recolour

Blue, white or grayscale only — never brand orange, black fills, or gradients on the mark.

Don't place on busy imagery

On photography, use the reverse lockup over a solid or scrim, never raw over detail.

Don't add effects

No drop shadows, outlines, bevels or glows on the logo itself.

Don't rotate or tilt

The pin's angle is fixed — rotating it reads as a different mark.

Don't add flourishes

Keep decorative elements (underlines, swooshes) well away from the lockup.

Colour system

Same palette, stricter roles. The premium shift is entirely in ratio: more neutral space, blue doing the heavy lifting, orange spent like a rare currency instead of a decoration.

Locate Blue
`#007AE8 · rgb(0,122,232)`

Primary. Links, CTAs on dark, icon strokes, key headline word.

Sky Cyan
`#75DFEE · rgb(117,223,238)`

Support only. Gradient/blob backgrounds and the pin's lower facet — never body text or icon fill.

Signal Orange
`#FF5900 · rgb(255,89,0)`

One accent per screen. The single primary action, or one key metric. Never decorative.

Ink
`#0D0D0D`

Body copy, and dark section backgrounds. Used more often in the refined system for contrast and weight.

Muted
`#63666B`

Secondary text, captions, metadata.

Line
`#E6E6E6`

Borders, dividers, card edges.

Soft BG

#FBFCFF

Alternate section backgrounds instead of pure white — adds quiet depth.

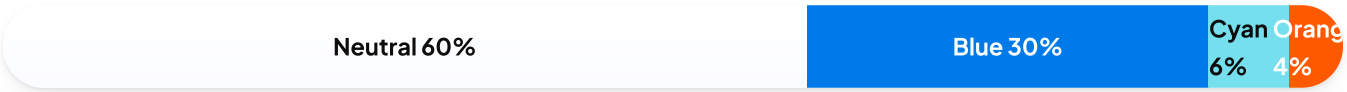

Row Alt

#F4F8FD

Table stripes, subtle chips, KPI tiles.

Usage ratio

Roughly how colour should divide across any page, slide or ad — the discipline that reads as "corporate" rather than "startup."

- Neutral — white, ink, soft bg, muted text
- Blue — structure & trust
- Cyan — quiet gradient support
- Orange — the one action

OLD HABIT	REFINED RULE
Orange squiggle under headline	Drop it. Use a thin, single-colour underline in cyan at low opacity, or no underline at all — let type weight carry emphasis.
3 overlapping blobs per hero	One, maybe two. Larger, softer, lower opacity (≤18%), placed off to one side, never behind text.
Orange on every button	Orange marks the single primary action per view. Every other button is ink outline (ghost) or solid ink.
Gradient text for every big number	Reserve the blue→cyan gradient number for one hero statistic per document, not every KPI.
White cards on white page	Alternate white and soft-bg (#FBFCFF) sections so structure reads without needing colour to separate them.

Typography

Two typefaces, unchanged. The premium lift comes from tighter hierarchy, more restrained weight use, and sentence case instead of exclamation-heavy headlines.

OLD HABIT	REFINED RULE
Title Case Everywhere	Sentence case for all headlines and buttons — reads calmer, more considered.
Exclamation marks in headlines	None. Confidence is stated plainly, not shouted.
Every heading extra bold	Reserve 800 weight for H1/H2 only; H3 and below use 700 for a clearer hierarchy.

Voice & tone

Direct, plain-English, outcome-led. Australian spelling throughout. The tone doesn't change for "premium" — corporate confidence here means fewer words, more specificity, never hype.

Outcomes, not deliverables

Talk about new patients booked and cost per enquiry — never posts published or impressions served.

Plain English

No jargon a business owner wouldn't use themselves. If a term needs explaining, cut it or explain it in one clause.

Specific over vague

"37 enquiries at $24 each" beats "great results." Real numbers, or no number at all.

Confident, not hypey

State the value once, clearly. No stacked adjectives, no exclamation marks, no "game-changing."

SAY

"37 new enquiries last month, at $24 each."

AVOID

"We smashed it out of the park with amazing engagement!"

SAY

"No lock-in after the first 90 days."

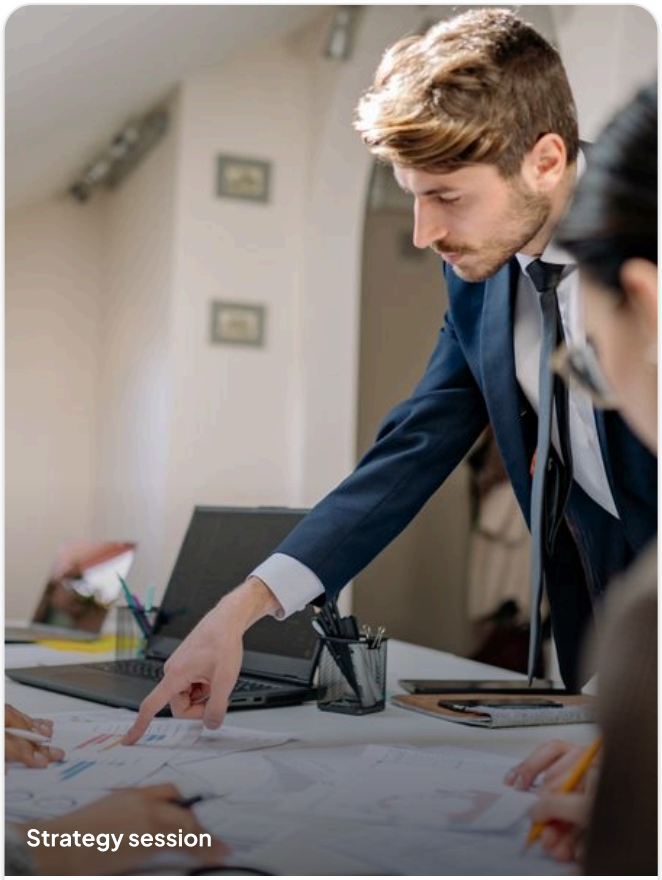

AVOID

"Unlock unlimited growth potential today!"

Photography & imagery

Sam is the face of the brand, shot real rather than staged. The direction leans toward finance and professional-services imagery — glass, structure, quiet confidence — over startup-casual, with genuine variety rather than one repeated setting. References below are free stock photography (Pexels) standing in for the look to shoot, shown in natural colour.

Strategy session

Real documents and data on the table, genuine discussion, natural light.

Productivity desk

Coffee, notebook and a closed laptop on a clean desk — the quiet-focus, get-it-done shot.

Boardroom

Minimalist conference room, considered furniture, quiet and empty or in genuine use.

Team collaboration

A younger, mixed team heads-down on laptops — informal energy, still sharp.

Office interior

Building facade

Minimal interior detail — clean lines, empty and calm, quiet backdrop for quotes/stats.

USE	AVOID
Natural light, candid-professional moments (laptop, meetings, studio portrait)	Generic stock photography — staged handshakes, fake smiling call-centre shots
Muted, neutral backgrounds so brand blue/orange stays the accent	Busy or brightly coloured backgrounds competing with the palette
Product/report UI shown in a clean browser-style card, per the site's report mock-up	Screenshots dropped in raw with no framing or context
Real client data and numbers wherever cleared for use	Fabricated statistics or unlabelled "example" data presented as real

UI & digital components

Same components as the current site — pill buttons, soft cards, rounded icons — tuned for restraint: quieter shadows, colour spent on one element per view, decoration kept to the edges.

Buttons

Book a free audit →

Secondary action

Ghost / tertiary

Orange primary is reserved for the one action you actually want taken on that screen. Every other action is ink-solid or ghost — never a second orange button competing with it.

Cards & elevation

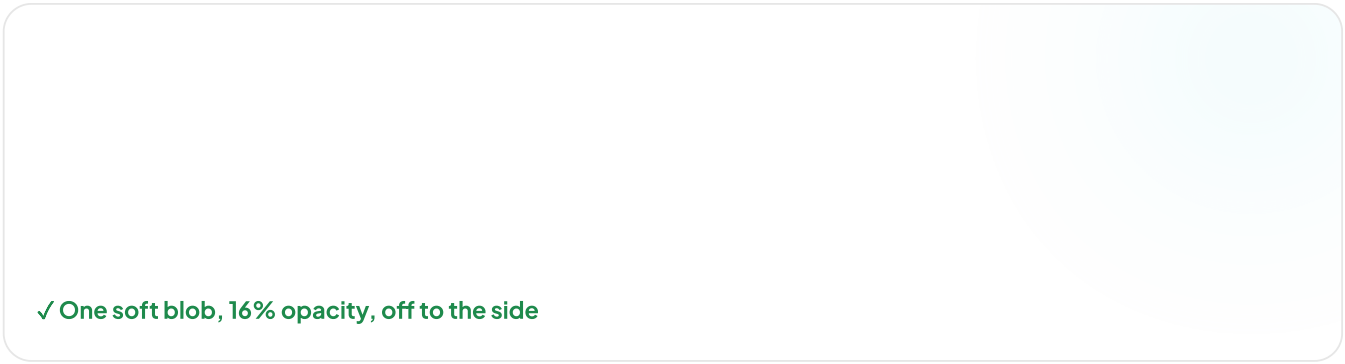

Quiet shadow

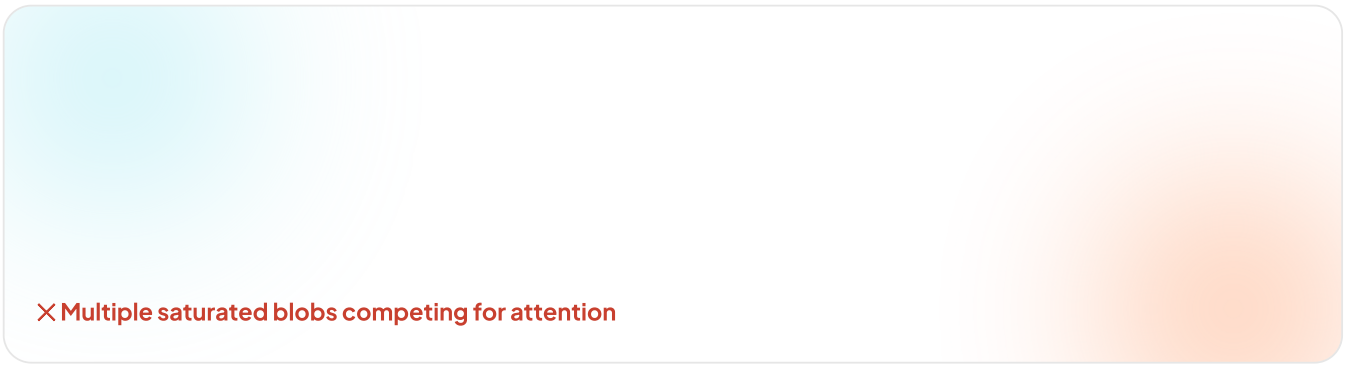

shadow-sm — 1px border + soft 8px blur. Default for all cards.

Elevated on hover shadow-md — used only on hover/focus, never resting state.

Decorative motifs — refined vs. busy

✓ One soft blob, 16% opacity, off to the side

✕ Multiple saturated blobs competing for attention

Layout & spacing

The single biggest lever for "premium" is whitespace. Widen the margins, slow the rhythm, let one idea breathe per section.

OLD HABIT	REFINED RULE
Cards packed edge to edge	Generous gutters (20–24px) and consistent section padding, even if it means fewer items per row.
Every section the same white	Alternate white / soft-bg / ink sections to create rhythm without extra colour.
Copy stretching full width	Cap headline and lead paragraph width (~680px) so lines stay readable and considered.

Applications

Where this system already lives, and where the refined rules above should be applied next.

Website

locatedigital.io
Apply reduced blob count, single-accent buttons, wider section padding.

Pitch deck

launch/pitch-deck.html
Light, generous slides with one blue or orange highlight per slide.

Documents

Proposals, rate cards, agreements
Soft-bg pages, ink headings, orange reserved for the single CTA button.

Social tiles

Posting calendar assets
The one place the expressive gradient/blob treatment can stay bolder.

Avatars & favicons
Symbol mark on brand blue, always square, always centred.

Quick reference

The one-page version — pin this next to the file before shipping anything client-facing.

Do

- ✓ One orange element per screen, max
- ✓ Generous whitespace over dense layouts
- ✓ Sentence case headlines, no exclamation marks
- ✓ Real numbers in copy wherever possible
- ✓ Alternate white / soft-bg / ink sections for rhythm
- ✓ Clear space equal to symbol height around the logo

Don't

- ✕ Stack more than one glowing blob per view
- ✕ Put orange on more than one button at a time
- ✕ Recolour, rotate, stretch or shadow the logo
- ✕ Use vague claims ("amazing results") without a number
- ✕ Mix gradient text into more than one stat per page
- ✕ Use exclamation marks or hype language
